Measuring the impact of COVID-19
on your workforce

The disruption to normal working practices caused by COVID-19 may have had a profound impact on your employees.

Your employees have faced the challenges of working from home, furlough leave, the threat of redundancy or continuing to come into the office throughout a global pandemic.

Whether you're a large company looking for a partner to help you develop and implement your engagement strategy or you are considering your first employee survey, the research team at Aberdeen & Grampian Chamber of Commerce can help. When it comes to measuring employee engagement, our employee engagement survey is a valuable tool. The survey questions and categories are created to ensure that all aspects of employment are covered in detail. Our employee engagement survey consists of 80 questions which are grouped into 17 core categories. This means that analysis can be provided on which areas of the business are working well and which can be improved. For senior management we also offer analysis by five higher level groupings and provide you with an overall staff engagement metric. This provides a simple metric to enable you to monitor change over time and track progress.
