Businesses offered help to navigate choppy waters of compliance

Water is essential to life, but the risks around its everyday use are not always quite so clear.

Many businesses have no idea that a legionella risk assessment is needed if there is a water tank on their premises, even if it isn't used.

Environmental compliance law is constantly changing and with water widely identified as the utility cost that will increase most in the next 20 years, improving water efficiency while remaining compliant will remain a major driver for all organisations in the future.

A seminar later this month focuses on keeping both staff and customers safe with a team of experts from three of the UK's leading water management and sustainability companies: Green Compliance, Minimise Solutions and Minimise Group.

The session provides advice on what organisations can do now – and what they should prepare to instigate in the coming years.

The programme will also provide advice on identifying, monitoring and implementing water efficiency opportunities, helping delegates to improve water quality, cut consumption and reduce water utility costs.

Held at Aberdeen & Grampian Chamber of Commerce, the “Water Compliance: Home and Dry” seminar will take place on Wednesday, May 20, at the Hub in Aberdeen Energy Park.
